LAST night, Mr Stanley placed Offenbach's opera ' Madame Angot ' on the stage at the Theatre Royal. The attendance was a fair index of the estimate the public put upon 0.75 | the ability of the Stanley Opera Company to render anything rising above the level of burlesque, and the upper sircle was left almost entirely to the wife of a mandarin at Canton and her attendants who seemed to derive a great deal of enjoyment from the performance. In spite of some drawbacks the opera was presented in a fairly oreditable manner. The dresses and accessories 1.00 were really all that could be desired. But taken as a whole the performance did not rine to a very high level, and had it not been for the charming singing of Miss Denver ca Clairette Angot and the visatious soting of Miss Fanny Stanley in the role of Madie Lange the reputation of the Company would have suffered. None of the male parts recoived anything like a fair representation. There was a too obvious listlessness and lack of interest, but how much of this was due to overwork or utter carelessness it is difficult to say. With a nightly change of programme, it is easy to understand how hard Chartrouse, Dr. Siegert's Angostura it is to get sufficient grosp of the purpose of a character; but it the ladies are able to do so well, something hetter might be expected from the other members of the Company. Mr Dris-237 | coll had no scope in Louchard and there was a dreariness in his attempt to raise a laugh. In the very unimportant part of Grenitz, Mr W. Stanley showed more symptoms of life, and if he had a better ... voice to support his acting, he would have deserved a more prominent position in the cast. Miss Dolly Childs was fasoinating as usual as Amarante. Of course, an oppurtunity had to be got for the danningtalent, and Miss Tiliy Lake was heartily: applauded for a very graceful dance. Miss Fanny Stanley deserves to be highly complimented on her assumption of the part of Mudle Lange. She is a minch better actress than recalled, but sto used her voice to no small advantage both in the solos and the concerted pieces. It is unnecessary to add that the chief honours were carried off by Miss Denver, who was not, however, in so good voice as on the previous nights, though she had to respond to saveral succres. Conductor Zeplin got more sound than usual

The outcome of the curious legal point raised by the arrest by the police of a sentinel at Easthourne is looked for with much interest and curiosity. It is difficult to understand the story in its present uspect. It would seem that Private at Eastbourno, challenged Police-Sergeant Burr with his rifle, was then arrested by the latter. The case being adjourned, on the application of the adjutant of the regiment, so as to allow a communication being made with the Horse Guards, it is wondered whether that officer's contention that Army Act will be upheld. If it should not be, a lively picture is conjured up of what might be the result. An officer visiting his sentries by night might find one or two of them unaccountably missing, and not discover until the morning that they had police station. - United Service Gazette.

POLITICIANS WHO ARE WITS.

People who go to the strangers' gallery of the House of Commons on a duil night close their eyes during the tedium of debate, get jogged on the shoulder by the watchful ushers, and told not to go to leleep, may perhaps be excused the belief that the Lower House of Parliament is not a mirth-making assembly. Truth to tell, the pages of Hansard must be ransacked to discover the humorous sallies which at long intervals enliven the proceedings of our legislators in Parliament assembled.
